

Meet Jason.

Jason's High school English teacher has been surprised by the creative ways in which Jason has been using BYOD to enhance his learning. Jason recently asked if he could use his cell phone to take a picture of an assignment on the board instead of writing it down. Instead of passing out a vocabulary list to Jason, Jason asked if he could just take a picture of it with his phone. Jason's English teacher is thinking about encouraging the entire class to follow his lead. Rather than using class time to pass out papers, this will save on both copy paper and instructional time (Paper will still be an option for those without phones).
